Finance 'Superman' Leaving Daly City

An Acting Finance Director

Ronald L. Mitchell, assistant to Daly City's city manager, became acting finance director for the city today, carrying out the former duties of C. Robert Green.

Mitchell, who resides in Daly City, has worked in the city manager's office two years.

By TERRY DAVENPORT

It's hard to picture C. Robert Green emerging from a telephone booth garbed in a blue jersey emblazoned with a red "S."

But in the field of finance, mild-mannered Green definitely has the image of Superman.

When Green became director of finance for Daly City on Jan. 1, 1976, the city's finances were, he modestly concedes, a mess.

"When I came, I didn't know how bad it was," Green said. During the year that Daly City operated without a director of finance, records became so garbled that auditors refused to approve the city's financial statements. The city's bank account hadn't been completely reconciled for almost two years.

That didn't phase Green. Within six months he had Daly City's finances in tip-top shape. The auditors wiped their brows with relief.

Moans could be heard throughout City Hall earlier this month when Green submitted his resignation. He will become director of financial administration and control for Clackamas County, Ore., a job in which he will report directly to a county commission serving 250,000 citizens, Aug. 21.

City Manager David Rowe called Green "the most capable director of finance we've had during my 15 years with the city." Even long-time city critics such s Conrad Pavellas and Julius Castelan have expressed regret about Green's departure.

Green couldn't resist the urgent call from the North. "I enjoy the challenge of coming into a place that needs help and making people happy," he said.

In his new job, Green will have the responsibility of straightening out the finances for a county that has grown rapidly and whose local government recently was reorganized.

It didn't take long for Green to establish his "Mr. Fix-it" reputation. Born and raised in South Whitley, Ind., his first job was auditing for the firm of Ernst & Ernst of Cleveland. Green quickly moved up to become a consultant and was transferred West — first to San Francisco, later to Los Angeles.

In Los Angeles he was offered the position of international controller for the Getty (as in John Paul) Oil Co., where he handled the finances of 40 companies sprinkled around the world.

One business acquaintance hired him away to head the finances and help manage a new chemical company in Iran. Green spent two years at that task.

Returning to the United States in 1968, Green became director of finance for the City of Burbank at the time that the television show "Laugh-In" was most popular. Used to bearing the brunt of Rowan and Martin jokes, Green good-naturedly titled one bond prospectus. "Beautiful Downtown Burbank." He recalled, "The folks in New York got a big kick out of that one."

Green liked working in the public sector. From the Members of the Daly City Crickets Gymnastics Team completed 4,000 cartwheels Friday during the First Annual Cartwheel-A-Thon held at the Westlake Community Center. The 20 girls, who each completed the maximum 200 cartwheels allowed, earned nearly $1,000, which will be used to cover uniform and competition expenses. The Crickets team, under the instruction of Rosalie Lindsey and Lisa Clearwater, is part of the gymnastics program offered by the Daly City Recreation Department. It is open to girls who are 6 years of age and older. Fall classes are scheduled to begin in September.

Study of Police Merger?

By DUANE SANDUL

A study which could lead to recommendations to consolidate police departments in San Mateo County will soon get under way if the San Mateo County Criminal Justice Council Wednesday authorizes a $50,000 grant.

The financial implications of Proposition 13 are spurring police officials to look closely at cost-sharing plans which historically have been ignored in the name of political and geographical sovereignty.

During the past decade the cities of Belmont and San Carlos, and Foster City and San Mateo have looked at consolidation, but not seriously.

The scope of the new study, though, could be much broader.

"The overriding taxpayers support for the Jarvis-Gann initiative implies that there will be a basic restructuring of traditional services at the municipal and county levels," said Anne Taylor, executive director of the council.

The Criminal Justice Council acts on federal grants for programs in the criminal justice area.

The project envisions an examination of all police services rendered by the county's 18 autonomous policing agencies.

"The study should identify cost-saving measures which may necessitate a significant departure from existing organizational and political configurations in addition to those which may be achieved within the existing structure," Ms. Taylor said.

Simplified, that means potential consolidation of an unspecified number of departments.

Police agencies, including the sheriff, employ more than 1,400 sworn officers.

"Although inter-agency cooperation has increased substantially over the past few years, members of the Police Chiefs' Association of San Mateo County feel it is imperative that additional efforts be made to increase the cost-effectiveness and efficiency of police services," Ms. Taylor said.

Put another way, police officials are now weighing whether it is necessary for each department to have record-keeping, investigative services, and other common services.

The specific project objectives, Ms. Taylor said, would include:

- To identify and to recommend short-and long-range cost-saving measures "within the existing organizational and political structure."
- To identify and to recommend alternative organizational and political configurations which would result in "significant savings and-or increased efficiency."

Under the proposal, a review committee comprised of three city managers, a county manager's aide, three police chiefs and the sheriff would assist the study group.

Council OKs SSF Police Reorganization

Police Chief James Datzman's proposal to reorganize the South San Francisco Police Department from top to bottom was approved Monday by the City Council.

The crux of the plan, Datzman said, is that more administrative responsibility will be distributed to more police personnel while field-oriented services are beefed up.

Under the plan, administrative positions would be reduced, the number of patrolmen would be increased and the number of motorcycle officers would be halved.

Police Department staffing would be cut from 70 sworn personnel to 68 by eliminating positions of captain and personnel and inspeetions sergeant.

Sixteen officers will be moved into a Police Officer II position, which combines the police detective position with other specialized functions.

The number of captain's positions would be reduced from three to two. No one would be laid off, Datzman said, because a captain is leaving the department next month.

In the present department there are eight administrative positions and 62 field-oriented and investigation positions.

With the reorganization, the number of administrative positions would be reduced to six and the other 62 positions would be realigned.

Chief Datzman said the city can save $53,000 this fiscal year by adopting the plan and about $48,000 can be saved the following year.

In the chief's original projections, the city was expected to save only $35,700 by adopting the plan.

Annual savings will amount to almost $72,000, Datzman said, but some of that will be offset by a 10 percent salary increase to the Police Officer IIs.

Councilman Terry Mirri said he supported the plan because he respected the chief's professional judgment and because the plan has the support of the Police Department.

Councilman Emanual Damonte said he approved of the plan because it was good for the department, not because of the cost savings.

He noted the department could save as much money by just not filling two administrative positions.

The City Council approved the plan, 4-0, with Mayor William Borba abstaining.

Fair's Chief Quits

Sal Millan, general manager since 1968 of the San Mateo County Fair Association, announced that he has resigned, effective yesterday.

Millan said "I have met the challenges here that were available and now am looking into broader opportunities that are available to me."

He said he is first going to take a "much needed rest."

Millan presided over his 11th county fair a week ago, his "most successful to date."

Eleven years ago, he said, "I was invited to San Mateo to restructure the fair and improve the quality of the facility, for broad usage year round in addition to the annual fair, and this has all been done."

The fair management has been under some close scrutiny ever since the passage of Proposition 13, with a number of conferences going on informally between supervisors, city councilmen, and convention bureau and fair officials.

Several, approached a week ago by The Times, simply said they were looking at a "number of options."

The options appeared to include consolidating the fairgrounds operation with the San Mateo County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

John Condon, mayor of San Mateo and president of the San Mateo County Convention and Visitors Bureau, plans to approach the county Fair Board later this month about the possibility of merging the bureau with the fair board.

Condon cites several advantages to the proposal.

"The convention bureau goes out and seeks conventions to be sold to the cities. By the same token, the fair board does the

Pacifica Asks Study Of Sweeney Park Idea

The Pacifica City Council has agreed to request a federal study to determine if it is possible to make the Sweeney Ridge area a national park.

For the past six weeks the council has been considering a citizens' petition that the ridge area be set aside as a park. The petition with about 4,000 signatures on it was presented to council members last month.

Councilwoman Ellie McGuire included in her motion the provision that the study include the possibility of an east-west access road into the park. She said Sharp Park Road was not to be considered as that access road.

Another condition of the council action is that the city of Pacifica is not expected to participate "either fiscally or operationally" in the maintenance of the park.

Action on the request Monday was unanimous with Mayor Nick Gust not participating in the discussion because he has an indirect financial interest in West Aspen Co., a subsidiary of Texas International, which has proposed a multi-million dollar housing development for the area.

An attorney for West Aspen Co., Conrad Breece, said after the meeting that company representatives will meet with Pacifica residents to see if they would accept an offer to dedicate most of the area to the city.

In his previous presentations to the council, Breece has said the company is willing to dedicate 897 acres of the 1,096-acre parcel to open space, which he said is about 80 per cent.

When asked if he believes the company has been shut out of developing the land, Breece said he had no comment.

In a letter to the council, another attorney for West Aspen Co., Douglas Martin Jr., stated that Pacifica's chances of obtaining the land for a national park "are very slim indeed."

Martin stated that extensive hearings were held in 1971 on related matters and at that time the request for the federal government to buy Sweeney Ridge was ignored.

"The property was not purchased and there is not present prospect that it will be purchased," he said.

The attorney said that a request for a study is "bootless and a waste of some taxpayers' money," adding that it has yet to be determined what the community would do if the federal government will not give residents the park for free.

"The real question is now many citizens are for more parks if it costs them something," Martin said.

In the meantime, he said, "The West Aspen Co. cannot wait indefinitely."

A study of the present general plan and ordinances lead the company to believe "an orderly and attractive development" of the West Aspen property would be permitted, he said.

"In drawing up our application, we will have in mind the suggestions and concerns which we have heard voiced in the general plan study session," Martin stated.

Council members had only a few brief comments to make about the action.

Mayor Pro Tem Stan Farber said he wanted it understood that, when the city says it does not want to be responsible for maintaining the park, that start, he decided not to mix politics with his job.

"I make it clear that I won't get involved in politics," he explained.

Green took a leap across the United States for his next assignment.

In 1972 be became secretary-treasure of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, one of the largest planning organizations in the country.

With 1,250 employees working under him, he controlled planning for the two largest counties in Maryland and, predictably, earned accolades for his work. "We made oodles of money," Green said, explaining that he doubled the commission's annual interest income from $750,000 to $1.5 million.

But he preferred the West Coast, so he quickly packed his bags in 1976 when Daly City called for help.

Green is sad about leaving. "There are very few cities in the state that are better than Daly City. In fact, I have yet to find one," he said, adding that straightening out Daly City's finances was "one of the most satisfying feelings of any time in my career."

Although the passage of Proposition 13 gave Green headaches — because of it he lost 10 of his 24 employees — he denied that the property tax initiative prompted him to leave. "Let's just say it made it easier for me to make my decision," he remarked.

Green sees one advantage due to Proposition 13. He had long disagreed with the city's policy of hiring temporary and part-time employees instead of spending more money and increasing the number of full-time personnel. Because of Proposition 13, Daly City recently fired all temporary and part-time employees. Green said the loss of 10 employees won't cause big problems in the finance department because he never entrusted part-time and temporary employees with big responsibilities.

"There's no question about our capability of doing work. it just may take longer," he commented.

Although he had only visited Oregon a few times, Green has no qualms about transferring north.

"The rain doesn't bother me. I figure, if you can put up with Daly City's fog, you can put up with rain," he said, smiling.

But the drizzly Oregon climate may put a damper on his image.

After all, how many superheroes wear yellow slickers?

Community Center on November Ballot

San Brunans in November will be asked to vote on the controversial issue of construction of a downtown community center, the City Council decided Monday night.

On a split 3-2 vote, the council said it will submit to voters the proposal to construct a downtown community center in the former Hatlo Market at 446 San Mateo Ave. The outcome of the vote, however, will be advisory only and will not be binding on the council.

The ballot proposal will state:

"Shall the City of San Bruno proceed to complete the downtown community center project (Hatlo site) with property purchase, remodeling and furnishing costs of approximately $550,000, to be financed with federal funds, and annual operating costs of approximately $20,000 to be locally financed from the city's general fund. This is an advisory measure."

Getting the measure on the ballot was a victory for Councilman Doug Dawkins, who was elected to his post in March. Dawkins has been a long-time opponent of the construction of a community center at the Hatlo site.

Funds for the proposed community center are to be paid for under the auspices of the federal Housing and Community Development Act. Some $600,000 has been allocated by the federal government for the project.

The council's action came after City Manager Gerald Minford recommended that the city reject both bids submitted for remodeling of the Halto site.

"I have recommended that we reject both bids for the downtown community center project on the premise that the bids are excessively high due to the controversial nature of the project and the reluctance of constractors to spend the time and money necessary to prepare competitive bids," Minford said.

Two bids were received, one for $548,325 and the other for $645,466. Minford had estimated the remodeling costs to be about $300,000.

Mayor Dick Griffith and Councilman Tom Ricci cast the two no votes against putting the measure before voters Nov. 7.

Citing a long history of confrontation politics in San Bruno, Griffth said he has not heard any "overwhelming support for putting this measure on the ballot or for not building it."

The mayor added: "We should not put petty rivalries of individual councilmen before the voters. The time has come for the council to perform its proper role."

Councilman Ricci agreed. "We need a community center here," he said. "San Bruno has a way of procrastinating...but sometimes we have to take action. I do not feel this should go before the voters."

Dawkins, however, countered, "It's only common sense and fair play to ask the rest of the stockholders in the community if they want to approve this project. The key vote on the measure was made by Councilman Gary Mondfrans, who earlier had opposed putting it before the voters for fear that even if it were approved the city might lose the federal funds because of the delay. However, Mondfrans was assured by a county representative that funds would not be jeopardized by a November vote.

same thing -- it tries to sell exhibitions. They're both in the same promotional business. Combining the two would mean economy of personnel, effort and property," Condon remarked today.

He said he foresees booking more conventions at the fairgrounds and physically merging the offices of both organizations.

"We would be inclined to leave our office if we could swing it," Condon added.

Condon said he plans to bring up the idea at the Convention and Visitors Bureau's Aug. 25 board meeting. If he receives support for the idea from the board, he said, he will approach the members of the fair board.

"I'm not going to go to a lot of trouble and effort promoting this idea if I don't have their support," Condon commented.

Both organizations have their own boards — the fair board is elected by their own organization, a non-profit corporation which annually contracts every five years with the county for operation of the fairgrounds, the fair and maintenance.

The Convention Bureau is operated by representatives from each participating community, and the county, as well as hotel representatives and at large members, with city councils participating in naming delegates.

The Fair Association also has had representatives. The contract has one year to run, and expires at the end of 1979.

While renegotiations usually would start this fall, Prop. 13 has hurried it up.

Chairman of the Board of Supervisors Ed Bacciocco today said:

"Hiro Higashi, chairman of the fair board, advised me last Thursday that Millan has submitted his resignation and that it has been accepted."

Bacciocco said he did not know what brought it about.

Bacciocco said he has arranged a luncheon meeting in September between the supervisors and the fair board to discuss the matter.

The board met Wednesday night with the 12 members unanimously accepting the resignation, he said.

No successor has been chosen. He said Phil Lindecker, the assistant manager, has been named interim manager.

"We may recruit for a permanent manager, but we are going to take a look at how Phil performs," Higashi said.

He added that he expects Lindecker to be in the running for a permanent manager.

The action last week climaxed three weeks of rumors marked by "no comment" reactions of those involved.

The board of supervisors, which bankrolled fairgrounds maintenance to the tune of $105 thousand a couple of years ago, brought that down to $90,000 this year, and have been looking at a post-Jarvis Gann budget of $70 thousand.

Millan, who had felt two weeks ago that he had a majority of board support for a separate fair and convention bureau operation, admitted today that it had eroded but could not explain why.

A consolidation move, eliminating his position, could appear to save money, he acknowledged, but in the end, he felt, would lose a great deal more.

Millan saw a consolidation as saving about $40,000 with elimination of his salary, and another $40,000 by eliminating the salaries of clerks in both organizations. To this could be added a savings of rental of the bayside bureau quarters, which would bring the figure close to the subsidy given the fairgrounds by the county a year ago.

Higashi, president of the San Mateo County Fair Association, today told the Times that he will not be surprised to see a move in the county Board of Supervisors to make the fairgrounds a year-round revenue-producing operation for the general fund.

The annual county fair itself, which receives support from the State Department of Fairs and Expositions (F&E) and other state level support may be excepted, he indicated.

After discussions with supervisors, Higashi said, it appeared the main issue before the supervisors regarding the fairgrounds is the lack of direct revenue produced by the fairgrounds, whose capitalization is one of the largest in the county.

Originally, the fairgrounds was thought of as a community asset for meetings and gatherings, and was supported by the supervisors on a non-profit basis for that purpose, he admitted.

In recent years, the fairgrounds has been looked upon as a nucleus for attracting large conventions, which indirectly contribute huge sums to the county and to the cities through the motel bedroom tax paid into them.

With huge losses in property tax revenues, the county has been forced to look elsewhere for money.

Ridge

includes sewers and police services.

He also said he wants some thought given to whether "some development is compatible with a national park."

Councilman Fred Howard said he had tried to put together wording for a ballot measure on the issue because he believes "very strongly" the public should vote on the park issue.

However, he said, he could not find wording that was not confusing so he gave up the idea.

The council also voted to ask that part of Sweeney ridge, which is the site where the Portola expedition first saw the Bay in 1769, be set aside as a National Monument site.

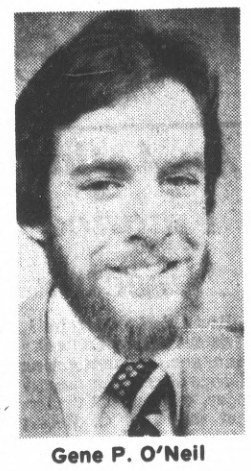
New Manager: Revive Chamber

By BILL HURSCHMANN

One of Gene P. O'Neil's primary tasks as new manager of the San Bruno Chamber of Commerce will be to revive the chamber's declining membership and restore it as a viable entity within the community.

"I've thought about setting different goals," says the 29-year-old O'Neil, "but now I just want to increase membership. That will be my chief priority, but I have no guesses as to how quickly I'll be able to do it."



Gene P. O'Neil

Less than 50 percent of the 500-plus businesses in San Bruno now are members of the Chamber of Commerce. That, O'Neil says, has to change.

"My job will be a lot easier if I were representing 80 percent of the businesses instead of 40 percent or so," he says. "You carry more clout when you want to have something done."

O'Neil, who attended college at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, majoring in business administration, believes his goal of increasing membership "won't be that hard. If I put the effort in I think the merchants will see that and respond to it.

"And if I can get all the merchants working together they'll feel the unity of a combined chamber."

Although interviewed after only a few days on the job, O'Neil already has visited a number of businesses and the response has been excellent.

"People who I visited who were not members of the chamber gave me every indication that they are willing to join," he says. "And those that already are members were just glad to see the new chamber manager."

O'Neil says he believes the chamber in the past has been less than aggressive in aquiring new members. "I'll try to bring a little vitality into the chamber, perhaps by being dynamic," he says.

For O'Neil, new memberships mean money in his pocket, for a large portion of his income will be commissions based on increased memberships. Although no one will state his salary officially, it is believed to be somewhere around $10,000 annually, plus commissions. That is substantially less than the approximate $20,000 annually the former chamber manager, Gerald Chandler, was making before the chamber's Board of Directors decided late last year not to renew his contract when it expired in June.

Another of O'Neil's jobs will be keeping aware of issues within San Bruno. "Many people in the community believe the Chamber of Commerce took appropriate stands with respect to business issues but was not visible enough. I'll be available to merchants. I'll be out walking the streets.

"However, I personally believe the chamber should stay removed from (community) politics. It's part of our bylaws that the chamber won't take political sides. If we've done it in the past, I suspect this will change."

WHICH WAY IS UP?

A person in a wheelchair leaving the central parking garage at San Francisco International Airport and heading for the central terminal faces a barrier of stairs and escalators leading to the baggage and ticket counter levels. Fortunately, there is an elevator from garage level to ground floor, and a hidden elevator to the ticket lobby.

Think It's a Hassle to Get Around the Airport? Try It in a Wheelchair

By GEORGE GOLDING

"I feel sorry for the poor guy," one airport officer said to another.

"He gets down here in his wheelchair and there's no way to get over to the central parking garage except that long ride around through Central Terminal."

The officer turned and walked back into "operations," South Terminal's ground-level headquarters for San Francisco International Airport's airfield safety officers.

In my rented wheelchair, I pushed along the sidewalk between South and Central Terminals, trying to find out how to get around the big airport as a handicapped person.

First thing I learned is that you ask directions.

Elevators are essential to people in wheelchairs, and there are few elevators at the airport.

There are fewer signs.

The elevator I had just come down in, from the South Terminal ticket counter level, is an unmarked freight elevator behind the American Airlines check-in desk.

At the ground level, the elevator empties into a corridor leading behind the "operations" offices to a narrower and unmarked door behind American's baggage carousel "B."

The corridor has a dog-leg in it, and operations officers say wheelchair people sometimes get lost in the turnings, and ask directions.

"Now that I'm down here," I asked, "how do I get to the parking garage?"

That's when the airport officer pointed out the long way around, through North Terminal.

The parking garage is only 20 or 30 yards from South Terminal, but it is separated by four lanes of automobile traffic, a parking lane, and three sidewalks.

For a wheelchair person, the long way is the only way.

I headed for Central Terminal and the distant elevator to the garage level.

In between was maybe a quarter-mile of variously sloping sidewalk, most of it jammed with hundreds of army and air force people waiting for buses.

Baggage belonging to the service people covered the concrete until there was barely room to walk.

But people move aside for a wheelchair, when they see it, usually without speaking.

More often, they do not seem to see the wheelchair or the person in it, blindly dodging past in their rush.

I made my way through the military, spinning around garment bags and duffle bags and suitcases, around people in uniform and wives carrying babies.

Entering Central Terminal from the front, the "down" elevator is easy to find. It is between the main entrance and the women's restrooms on the right, past a bank of public telephones.

That elevator reaches the garage level alongside the escalators which bring walking passengers to and fro.

From there on into the garage, the problem is merely one of distance. There are moving sidewalks and rubber covered moving ramps, and elevators to all floors.

Going in the other direction, into Central Terminal from the garage, is another matter.

Leaving the garage, the elevator is well-marked.

But once you arrive at ground-level in Central Terminal you face escalators with folding stairs, a concrete stairway, and a pair of long and carpeted ramps that lead away from the ticket counter area.

There is also an elevator. A hidden elevator.

It is a freight elevator in the baggage carousel area opposite the airport post office and behind the rentacar counters.

It is also a locked elevator.

To get in, you have to ask a guard or a skycap to key the lock.

This dim cubicle lifts you to a doorway in one of main entries to the Central Terminal.

It is an out-of-the-way location, difficult to find even after asking directions.

An airport operations officer had followed us over from South Terminal.

"I just wanted to see how you made it," he said. "It's tough to give directions on how to get here." "Yes, we made it," I said.

Airport officials say wheelchair travel will be improved over the next several months as construction now under way is completed.

Expansion of the South Terminal customs inspection area for international passengers will bring into use an existing underground tunnel into the parking garage.

Later expansion of the South Terminal eastward, toward the Central Terminal, will bring a second existing tunnel into use.

Completion of North Terminal, expected within months, will activate several elevators which will permit wheelchair travellers full access to all public floors, the airport said.

And overhead ramps to the walkways to the parking garage may make some of the round-about routing unnecessary.

Access to and through an airport is only part of a journey for people in wheelchairs, and often the most difficult part.

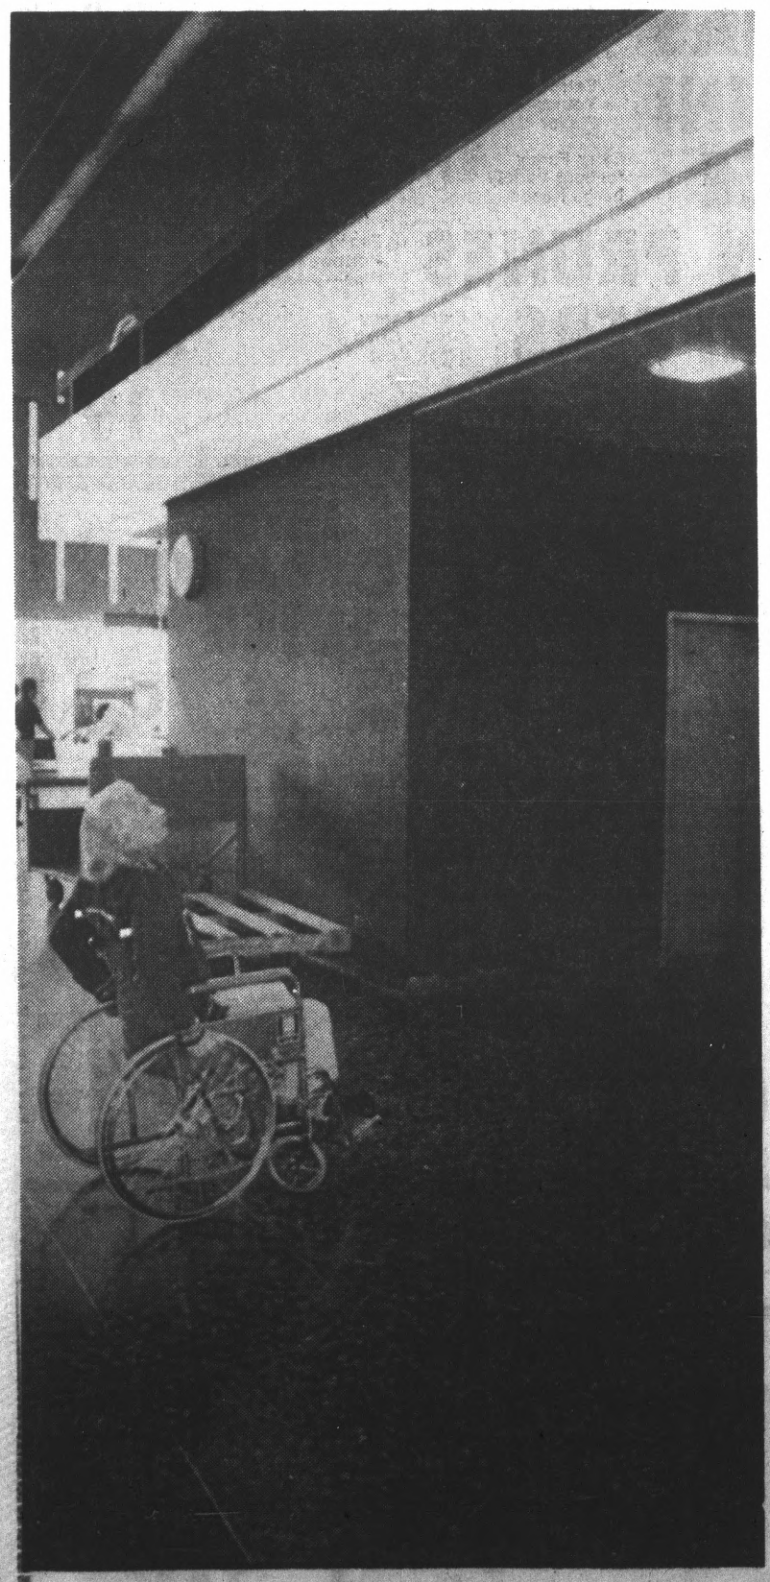
Using an airport requires changing modes of transportation at least twice.

Airlines generally accord people in wheelchairs special consideration, including boarding them first. Wheelchairs will be carried free, even though they exceed normal baggage weight allowances.

Airports, however, vary widely in their treatment of people who are handicapped.

In a services and a information guide distributed by United Airlines to its own employes, the company lists U.S. airports which "are accessible and can be entered and used, in most cases without being blocked by architectural barriers." by handicapped people.

San Francisco International does not get such a rating. San Jose does, and so does Oakland.



SIGN, SIGN, WHERE'S THE SIGN?

From the ticket counter area of the south terminal to baggage areas at ground level, the freight elevator at the right is virtually the only access for a person in a wheelchair. It is behind the American Airlines counter and is not marked. After asking its location, Times reporter George Golding, rolled his wheelchair back to locate the hidden elevator.

AS A BARRIER, NOT SO BAD

Compared to hidden and unmarked elevators, the airport security barriers that slow down physically normal people are not so bad for the handicapped. Once wheelchair travelers reach this point, airline customer service people are nearby to provide assistance in boarding. People blindly running to or from a plane, however, can themselves be a hazard.

Sandwich Exotica!

Ah, here is a delightful book! Diane Denbo Stevens found it behind a dusty shelf in an antique shop. In a moment she rescued it from its horrible title, "Sandwich Manual for Professionals."

In another she resurrected its recipes and presented them to the public under the original author's name, Louis P. De Goury, but in a new format. Three years later "Sandwich Exotics" (Running Press, $2.95) is making history .

So here we go. How about a three-decker masterpiece? On the lower level place broiled bacon, covered with sliced chicken and lettuce; on the upper level slices of green pepper and tomatoes; and on all levels plenty of your favorite spreads.

OR PERHAPS you prefer to cover the lower deck with lettuce leaves and chicken salad, topped with pitted olives, and more lettuce leaves; while on the upper deck you lay on slices of American cheese and tomatoes covered with lettuce and, of course, your favorite spreads.

In Sandwich Exotica there is a section entitled "Hot Sandwich Suggestions." How about a "Baked Beans Cheesewich" or a "Fried Egg and Green Pepper Sandwich" or a "Scrambled Egg Sandwich on Toast" with anchovy butter and crisp, fried bacon?

But if you want something that's really far out, try a creation made of shrimp salad, cucumber, tongue, green pepper and lettuce on Boston brown bread, Or create a sandwich of mashed sardines, horseradish, lettuce and shrimp salad on rye. For the "real he-man," the author recommends Swiss cheese, corned beef and bologna on the bread of your choice and garnished with dill pickles, lettuce and sliced tomatoes.

FOR THE person who likes to read while eating his sandwich creation, there is a chapter in "Sandwich Exotica" that tells of the origin of sandwiches. There is also a section on do's and dont's in making sandwiches. In the back of the book there's a chapter on color effects in sandwiches.

One section lists recipes for compounded butters. Ever hear of pimiento butter, or liverwurst butter, or pineapple-ginger butter! Another section gives recipes for such fillers and spreads as American and cheese nut filling, cream cheese chives, and pineapple spread.

The authors "of Sandwich Exotica" advise makers to proceed with a flair for the unusual and to cook by taste, not by ear or by guess and by gosh. They write "We believe that everyone in their own way is a sandwich professional. "Sandwich Exotica" is just a tool for stretching your imagination."

With such books to guide "he who explores the pantry shelf," anyone that is, can capture the thrill that made Dean Inge sbout "the whole of nature is a conjugation of the verb to eat . . ."

THE DIET CORNER

Marvelous machine . . . the mind — full of circuits and signals that would confound the most advanced computers. However, sometimes the signals short out when we need them the most.

For example, it takes 20 minutes from the time you place a morsel into your mouth until the time your stomach signals the message upstairs that it is full to capacity. If you gobble up everything in sight within 10 minutes you'll be totally unaware of your satiety until another 10 minutes has passed.

THAT IS why one of the easiest diet-tips I can offer you is simply to eat slowly. Try shifting into low gear when you start. Take your first bite and chew it slowly.

Now with great care, cut off a bit of meat, dissect away the fat, lift it leisurely to your mouth, and take your time about chewing and swallowing it. A sip of water or beverage and a pleasant comment on the weather, the food, the day to the family — then back to the languid business of eating.

Our family joke has always been, "Aunt Anna doesn't have heartburn," a fact which Aunt Anna was very proud when she described her sometimes maddening ability to stay at the table for over an hour. Aunt Anna also stayed at 118 pounds all of her adult life. Is there a connection? You bet.

AT THE opposite extremes are the pie-eating contests at carnivals. The reason the marathon munchers can ingest so much food in such a short time is that their poor, overworked stomachs don't have time to launch a "STOP!" rocket. As a home experiement, I suggest that you set your kitchen timer for 20 minutes before your next meal. Eat as you normally would. check the results — you'll be surprised. Besides, why rush through a dish that tastes as good as this:

PINEAPPLE CREAM PIE

- 1 can crushed pineapple (packed in own juice)
- 2/3 cup skim milk powder
- 2 packets artificial sweetener
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 3/4 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/4 teaspoon pineapple extract

In the small mixer bowl, add gelatin and 1/4 cup pineapple juice. Set aside three minutes. Add 1/4 cup boiling pineapple juice. Stir to dissolve gelatin. Add powdered milk. Mix at high speed for 10 minutes, then beat in lemon juice, extracts, and artificial sweeterner. Add drained pineapple last and mix at low speed. Put in 8" pie pan and refrigerate.

Like Aunt Anna, you'll suffer no heartburn. You'll get to taste your food, and you will honestly find that a smaller amount consumed over a longer time will bring you the same comfortably full tummy than much more munched much faster.

Good morning, good cooks.

The first item on our agenda today will be a recipe that combines blade pork steaks with an interesting assortment of seasonings and sauces to make an attractive and delicious main dish.

MEXICAN PORK PLATTER

- 2½ pounds pork blade steaks, cut ½ inch thick
- 2 Tablespoons lard or drippings
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 package (1¾ ounces) taco seasoning mix
- 1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
- ½ cup water
- 1 medium-size onion, chopped
- ½ cup pitted ripe olives, halved
- Cooked rice
- 1 avocado, peeled and cut in wedges
- 2 medium-sized tomatoes, each cut into wedges
- ½ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Cut the two and half pounds steaks into strips 2 inches long and 1 inch wide and brown in lard or drippings in large saucepan. Pour off drippings and salt meat with the one teaspoon salt. Combine the taco seasoning mix with the 15 ounces tomato sauce, half cup water, chopped onion and half cup ripe olives and stir into pork until well combined. Bring to boil, reduce heat, cover tightly and cook slowly 30 to 40 minutes or until meat is done, stirring occasionally.

Serve on platter with rice. Garnish with avocado and tomato wedges and sprinkle with the half cup grated cheese. Six servings.

Oh! Where did all the summer go? Already notices of "first fall season business meeting" are coming in and it is time to get down the calendars and start filing in the squares. There are busy days ahead!

One of the first groups to launch into the new season is the Mary's Help Hospital Guild. Sailing into fall on the stiff summer breeze we have been "enjoying," the guild members will assemble on Friday. Members of the tray favor committee and the members of the executive board will begin work at 10:30 a.m. with the general membership meeting slated to begin at noon with a luncheon in the cafeteria at 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Millie Dunow, the publicity chairperson, reports the boutique committee members have worked through the summer hiatus and are proud of the growing stock of items to be sold at the Christmas boutique in November.

Tickets remain on sale for the Daly City Area Chapter of American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) picnic to be held on September 11.

The tickets are being sold for $1.50 each with sale restricted to members only. The picnic is being catered and will be held at the Westlake Community Center.

Local school children will have an opportunity to compete in a poster making contest and have their art work hung around the Pacifica area as a part of the pre-festival build-up for the third annual Arts Festival sponsored by the Pacifica Arts and Heritage Council.

Joining in the effort to promote the arts in the coast community will be the members of the Pacifica Art Guild and the Spindrift Players. The two-day festival will be staged in the Old Firehouse on Pedro Point on October 14 and 15.

GETTING TO KNOW YOU

"Get to know us before you need us" is the theme of Mary's Help Hospital's exhibit on display in the mall of Serramonte Shopping Center through Aug. 20. Sister Florence, president of the board of directors of the hospital, gives Jim Sargen, general manager of the shopping center, some of the free literature available to acquaint the public with services available at the hospital.

JESD to Open on Time

The Jefferson Elementary School District will open the 1978/79 school year on a schedule similar to last year's.

Wednesday, Sept. 6, is the day when almost all students of the Jefferson School District will return to classrooms to begin their new school year.

For seventh graders, however, the first day of school will be Tuesday, Sept. 5. All seventh graders will begin on that day, which will be Orientation Day for them. This applies to seventh graders destined for Benjamin Franklin, Colma Intermediate and Fernando Rivera. Letters will be mailed to the parents from each of the intermediate schools, describing plans for the day.

The seventh graders will not be adding a day to their total school year, as they will not be required to attend school on what will be the last day of the year for all other students.

Approximately 7,000 students are expected to enroll in JSD's 15 schools this year.

New students may be enrolled in advance at each of the schools anytime after Aug. 21.

Help for Older Homeowners

State representatives wil be in Daly City Aug. 23 to help older homeowners and renters with their claims for senior citizens property tax assistance or senior citizens rent assistance.

A temporary office will be open at Lincoln Park Recreation Center, 901 Brunswick St., between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., according to Donald Whitney, director of Senior Citizens Programs for the Franchise Tax Board.

Howmowners may qualify for partial reimbursement of their 1977-179 property tax if they owned and lived in their home on December 31, 1977. They also must have been 62 years old as of Dec. 31, 1977.

Senior citizens who come for assistance should bring the forms they received in the mail from the Franchise Tax Board as well as pertinent records and documents, such as their 1977/78 property tax bill, income records, proof of age, and social security number, Whitney said. Renters would not have a property tax bill, but should bring all other information.

Airport Grow Limits Debated

In fact, according to one staffer, the number of aircraft operations at San Francisco International this year may exceed previous forecasts for 1980.

One of the increases in the current report, prepared by the consulting firm of Peat, Marwick & Mitchell, is a hike in the number formerly recognized as the airfield's capacity to handle airplanes.

Members of ALUC jumped on this increase, suggesting that the former "capacity" had been arbitrarily hiked upward to fit the latest predictions of air travel.

Dick Hall of Peat, Marwick & Mitchell said that had not happened. Instead, he said, the increase in expected capacity results from recent experience of the Federal Aviation Administration and new methods of forecasting.

Should a growth limit be set for San Francisco International Airport?

If so, how?

Those questions were raised Thursday night by members of the San Mateo County Airport Land Use Committee and will be sent on to a bi-county board trying to determine how to make a better neighbor of the big airfield.

Triggering those questions and others was one of a series of technical reports being prepared for the Joint Powers Board of San Francisco and San Mateo counties.

As a matter of routine, the reports are delivered to ALUC for comment.

The latest report forecasts increases in international airport passenger and aircraft traffic much larger than previous predictions.

Increases predicted are so much greater that the airport will soon pass previously established "limits."

ALUC member R. David Martin of Burlingame asked if an increase in numbers of takeoffs and landings meant that more would occur during noise-sensitive evening and early morning hours.

Staffers said that is one of the questions they are forwarding to the Joint Powers Board, which will hear the technical report Aug. 24.

They have a total of 11 questions, they said, including:

What is the capacity of the airport?

What is the relationship between forecasts of demand and airport capacity?

Under what conditions could annual operations exceed capacity?

Could airport capacity be designated in other terms than the 31 million passenger-per-year limit now accepted as policy by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission? Could the number of flight operations be an alternate limit?

Why is there a difference of 53,800 yearly operations between forecasts in the airport's own environmental impact reports and those in the current study?

Members of the Airport Land Use Committee accepted the staff's questions and directed that they be sent to the Joint Powers Board.

They also directed staff to call for public hearings on any future reports of such impact.

ALUC members said that the report's predicted 1990 capacity forecast of 415,000 operations per year casts doubt on the validity of previous capacity predictions of 361,200 operations by that time.

According to staffer Terry Burnes, FAA control tower operators now say the airport will serve 360,000 to 370,000 aircraft this year.

He said the FAA's concept of capacity as he understands it, is that when such a limit is exceeded, delays will become excessive.

Members of the committee and of the public challenged a basic assumption of the Joint Powers Board study, which is that "deregulation" of the airlines will have little effect on the airport.

Within the past three months, they said, lowered air fares have reportedly increased air travel by 24 to 28 percent, and added several planes to the numbers operating in and out of San Francisco International each day.

Burnes said that one factor in the increased predictions is the current accelerated growth of air taxi and commuter airlines. He said experts expect that growth to taper off.

Members of the committee toyed with the idea of establishing some growth limits for the airport, probably in terms of passenger numbers and numbers of flight operations. They reached no conclusion.

That is what one of the Joint Powers Board's subgroups is trying to establish, said Burnes: How can you impose limits?

I love Pet Rose (as a ball player, now — let's get that straight.). I've always maintained that he should be the highest paid player in baseball. But I must admit that I was rooting against him to break Joe DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting streak.

DiMaggio's being a boyhood idol has something to do with it, but having more to do with it is the — I hope — more mature, objective opinion that DiMaggio deserves it more.

Rose achieved his 44 game hitting streak as a switchhitter, cutting and slashing to all fields, bunting a couple of times to save the streak, a copule of other times to save the streak, a couple of other times having it extended probably because of artificial surface high bouncers.

JOE D. was strictly a power pull hitter, and never once changed his style to prolong the ball, but they could't always flag it down. Not ONCE in the streak did the Clipper try to bunt for the hit. He had no artificial surfaces, and in fact played in the toughest park in baseball for a right handed pull hitter — Yankee stadium. Many of his best shots during that streak were pulled in by far ranging outfielders.

So, sorry, Pete. DiMaggio's streak was just tougher to achieve.

ON THE GIANTS:

Joe Altobelli said in spring training that one of his priorities was to steady the defense. Although we all know that fielding statistics, more than any other baseball stats, can tell lies, the latest fielding stats at least indicate that perhaps Altobelli HAS improved the worst fielding team in the National League.

The Giants currently stand third in the NL in fielding average behind Los Angeles and new York (Cincy is seventh), and are tied with the Reds for eighth in doubleplays.

Johnny Lemaster has been berated all season for his erratic fielding, but San Diego's heralded rookie shortstop Ozzie Smith, Bill Russell, who Tom LaSorda calls the best shortstop in baseball, and highly regarded Frank Taveras of Pittsburgh, have all made 50 per cent more errors than Lemaster. Garry Templeton, St. Louis' Rookie of the Year last season, has more than doubled Lemaster's output of boots.

Houston rookie center fielder Terry Puhl has been on the front cover of national sports publications, but Larry Herndon's offensive statistics are just about identical to Puhl's, and he's a better defensive player.

Hope that Bill Madlock noted that Terry Whitfield played almost immediately after two whacks in the head and 20 stitches over one eye, while Madlock was out almost a week because of five stitches in his lip. Seems here that eyes are more important to hitting than lips. But then damaged lips do hamper talking, and THAT might have been Madlock's biggest handicap.

ON BASEBALL IN GENERAL:

Last time I looked, Montreal's outfield had a fantastic total of 39 assists, with 5 each from left and right fielders Warren Cromartie and Ellis Valentine, and nine from center fielder Andre Dawson.

And how about a few cheers for rookie Milwaukee manager George Bamberger, the old Oakland Acrons' curve-baller. Not only that he has his club chasing Boston, but HOW he has his club chasing the Red Sox — with a catastrophic series of injuries that, amazingly, have not proved catastrophic.

A brief list: Sophomore pitcher Moose Haas, who may have been the ace of the staff, tore an elbow muscle in late April, out for a month, still recovering; relief ace Bill Castro, out for a couple of short periods; southpaw starter Bill Travers, late start while still recovering from arm surgery of last year; catcher Ray Fosse, out for the season with knee surgery; catcher Andy Etchebarren, out for season with elbow surgery; regular first baseman Cecil Cooper, tearing the league up, suddenly out for two months (still recovering as a DH) with a broken leg; star infielder Don Money out for various periods with various ailments; rookie infield sensation Paul Molitor out for a short time; utility infielder Tim Nordbrook, with for season with nerve damage in knee; regular shortstop Robin Yount, reported late because of contemplated retirement, and then off to a slow start because of a sore foot; star slugger Larry Hisle out for a total of about a month; sensational young outfielder Sexto Lezcano, first out for 10 days in mid-April, currently out for indefinite period.

ASIDE from the fact that they have their usual suspect pitching and more injuries than usual, one of the reasons why Cincinnati hasn't pulled away from the pack is a depletion of their bench, which I pointed out theoretically before the season began. Now statistics, however, show it isn't just theory.

Cincy bench men, in 455 times at bat, are hittin a composite .226 with 19 doubles, one triple, 10 homers, 49 RBI and 53 runs scored. The only reason why the stats are THAT impressive are because of Mike Lum, who's having an outstanding part-time year. Take his bat away from the bench, and the rest of the subs are, in 366 times up, hitting .210 with 15 doubles, one triple, five homeruns, 32 RBI and 43 scored.

If you don't think the American League is a hitter's league, consider this: five AL pitching staffs have given up more hits than innings pitched. None have in the NL.

It isn't necessarily the DH rule, either, that makes the American League more of a hitter's league. Expansion teams Toronto and Seattle have much to do with it. They have team ERA's of 4.64 and 4.76, respectively. The next highest ERA in the league is 4.22 (Chicago). That's almost half a run difference. Atlanta has the highest ERA in the NL at 4.10, the only 4-plus team ERA in the league.

The league leaders in each league, the Giants and A's, are very close, at 3.15 and 3.22, respectively. The middle teams in each league, Pittsburgh, 6th at 3.53, and Texas, 7th at 3.66, are also comparable. In other words, throw out Toronto and Seattle, and the other pitching staffs of each league are about equal. And so would be the hitting.

IF YOU don't think Houston is rebuilding, what do you think they're doing with 10 rookies on the roster? For years I've advocated some sort of systenm for judging relief pitchers where the games they DON'T save are subtracted from their relief saves and wins. Now that famous anti-heartburn remedy, Rolaids, has institute the Rolaids Relief Man (clever?) award competition. They award two points for each win and save and subtract one point for each loss. That's better than how the leagues figure their top relief men, but I still think there should be a subtraction for the ones relievers don't officially lose, but just fail to save. And there should also be something done to the reliever who allows a tieing run in the ninth inning, then gets just one or two batters out, and then gets the win when his team bats in the last of the ninth and scores. The starter went maybe 8-2/3 innings and got nothing. In such cases, why not give the STARTER the save?

MORE on the Giants' Fan Club, instituted to bring the poor and the handicapped to Giants' games. President Anne Murphy (P.O. Box 3282, Daly City 94015) announced that the Hillside Homeowners Improvement Associaton has made a $50 yearly ledge, and yearly pledges is what really turns Anne on.

Also, I led readers to believe that the club provided "helpers" for their wheelchair groups. They do not for transportation and insurance reasons. They do, notes Murphy, buy seats for the people who bring the wheelchair into the park.

The victory lifted Natwick to third in the overall standings of the week-long races, which cover 500 miles and conclude Sunday.

Thursday's 89-mile road race on the Hunter-Liggett military reservation near King City was the seventh of 10 races in the competition.

Cancellation of JC Championships Likely

All statewide post-season athletic championships sponsored by the California Community and Junior College Association's Commission on Athletics will likely be cancelled in 1978-79.

The reason: passage of Proposition 13.

The decision, which has already been approved by the commission's executive subcommittee, is expected to be ratified by the full Commission on Athletics during that body's meeting Oct. 12 and 13 in Los Angeles.

Approval of the plan would mean that 30 state championships in 23 sports for both men and women at the community college level would be eliminated for at least one year. In some sports, there are divisions for both large and small schools.

It has been estimated that about 30,000 male and female athletes participate in interscholastic sports in the 99 California community colleges which are members of official athletic leagues.

Most of the schools will still field some athletic teams, but at reduced levels. They will compete for league titles. There may also be some playoff games with champions from neighboring leagues, but no more than one such game will be held after each league season is completed during the coming school year, if the Commission on Athletics goes along with its subcommittee's recommendation as anticipated.

California has the most extensive system of community colleges in the United States. Of all the 50 states, it is the only one to offer a tuition-free public education at the community college level.

Proposition 13 cut community college income by just over under 10 percent statewide, necessitating budget cuts at all schools and at the statewide level.

Athletics have been trimmed along with other programs and services.

In an unrelated move, the CCJCA has also announced that the Junior Rose Bowl will not be held in 1979.

That event had annually pitted the best California community college football team against the top-rated non-California school at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

The reason for that decision is that the Los Angeles Times has reportedly determined not to underwrite the game any more.

Giants Caps Get in Free

The Golden Gate Fields harness racing meet will salute the San Francisco Giants Thursday through Sunday, with all persons wearing Giant baseball caps being admitted to the grandstand free of charge.

In addition, the Giants-Dodgers series from Los Angeles will be shown on the television monitors throughout the plant.

Late Summer Swim

Television Feature For Nick's Patrons

The singing reputation of MARY ANN HAY continues to go before her. This vaudevillian, who in years past has played the Orpheum and Pantages circuits, entertained on riverboats cruising up and down the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, and has been delighting patrons of NICK'S restaurant, Rockaway Beach, many years with her song renditions, will be televised, along with the JIMMY PAYER GROUP, next Friday night when the crew of KPIX-TV's "Evening Magazine" show will set up cameras in Nick's newly-enlarged lounge for a future Channel 5 TV show. Enjoy an early dinner at Nick's, CAPTAIN CHARLES or THE MOONRAKER on Aug. 18, and don't miss the funfest.....If dessert at the GAZEBO restaurant, located on the lower level of Mateo Square, tastes familiar (Chocolate Fudge Cake, Carrot Cake, and Cheesecake), it's because PETER BYCZKOWSKI and JOHN RAGGIO, owner-operators of this fast-service restaurant featuring creative salads, seafood and sandwiches, order their desserts from The Back Door, a popular San Francisco bakery.....Besides being sought out by gourmets, BEARDSLEY'S in downtown Burlingame is a gathering place for artists. The restaurant, named for Artist Aubrey Beardsley, whose works are as popular today as they were in the late 19th century, depicts reproductions of the artist's works by local artists throughout the restaurant's interior and on exterior walls. Rosita entertains at the piano with folk, ballads, pop songs and music of yesteryear in Portuguese, Spanish, French and English at Scotty Campbell's, Wednesdays through Sundays, from 9:30 p.m.

Live Maine lobster is a popular item here. Just make a selection from the fish tank and have it prepared to enjoy in the dining area or to take home. The special this month is a complete Roast Beef Dinner (served family-style) for $4.....Sunday night's opening of the new disco program at BAYHILL LOUNGE was a huge success, report HARRY CURUSIS and MEL CICERO. LEE JAMES, the disco announcer, has a knack for selecting just the right disc pleasers for the dancing crowds.....It is well known that LOUIS FRUTSCHI of L'AUBERGE French restaurant is an authority on gourmet French cooking. But did you know that his expertise also extends to interior design (he created the country inn courtyard of his Redwood City restaurant), and that he is very competitive in sports (from motorcycles to skiing)? .....TILLIE SCHOLTZ, the hard-working owner of TILLIE'S 'LIL' FRANKFURT restaurant in Moss Beach, where German and continental cuisine is the specialty, is offering a special steak dinner for two every Saturday and Sunday that tabs out for $15. Also includes a bottle of champagne. Not open Tuesdays.

Testimonial On King's Table Food

Bilingual Parrot Stolen

A squawking, bilingual parrot named "Lolita" was stolen from a South San Francisco business last week and police are afraid that the youngster who took the bird may kill it.

Sgt. Fred Carelli said the parrot was taken from Eva's Drapery in the Southwood Center about 10 a.m. The owner of the store, Eva Welch, told police she was in the back when the bird was taken.

She chased the youth, who was described as being about 15 years old and having blond hair, but could not keep up with him when he jumped over fences.

The bird is a South American parrot with lime green plumage and yellow feathers on the head. Lolita is 26 years old and frequently calls out "Eva."

The parrot speaks English and Spanish, police said.
